Local students get chance to explore WIT at virtual open days

The addition of booths in an online exhibition place complete with course flyers and people to chat to means that people who want to explore specific areas will have access to the same people and resources albeit online.

WATERFORD Institute of Technology (WIT) is to run two virtual open days next week (20th and 21st November) to help prospective undergraduate students and adult learners across Waterford city and county with their going to college questions.

The virtual open day will be accessible via www.wit.ie/open.

The launch of a new virtual campus tour for the online open days will be for many the first exclusive insight into the Sunday Times Institute of Technology of the Year 2021 since Government restrictions were introduced last year.

Marketing and outreach officer at WIT, John Power explains how this open event will differ from other events. "What we have found from running previous virtual open days is that the people who attend are those who really want to engage with the days. We have made a huge effort to make sure that they will have as much to engage with as they would an in-person open day. The fact it is taking place online allows for a wider amount of people from the city and across Co Waterford to participate and explore their study options."

Last year, over 1,600 of the 5,000 plus new higher education-going students in the region in 2019, or almost 1 in 3 (30%) chose WIT.

On Friday, 20th November from 12.00 noon to 4.00 p.m. the traditionally schools focused open event will be targeted mainly at people interested in WIT's 70 CAO courses including three brand new courses and its common entry course offering.

On Saturday, 21st November from 12.00 noon to 4.00 p.m. lecturers, staff and students will be on hand again to deliver specialist talks and answer queries on all aspects of college life and course choices from everyone from school leavers to adult learners looking to boost their career prospects.

A big part of each virtual open day is the chance to talk with lecturers who deliver on undergraduate programmes and the support staff from right across the institute. "Online each day you can chat with staff from our admissions, schools liaison, outreach, fees and grants, accommodation and student life and learning departments," he adds.

The online open day experience will closely map an in person open day. When people arrive to the dedicated web space they will be able to ask for directions to where they should go by going to the Help Desk. "Just like pre-pandemic open days visitors to open days have a choice of talks to attend and the chance to ask questions of lecturers, staff and students. The addition of booths in an online exhibition place complete with course flyers and people to chat to means that people who want to explore specific areas will have access to the same people and resources albeit online," he adds. The timing of the virtual open days are crucial for CAO applicants – the countdown is on to the 20 January early bird CAO registration deadline. In addition for part-time, postgrad, Springboard and flexible learning students there are a number of courses with a January start.

Virtual Open Day FAQs

What is a virtual open day?

WIT's virtual open days are an interactive way for prospective students and parents to digitally discover courses, college life and what it's like to be a student of ours. By taking part in WIT's virtual open events you will have the opportunity to chat live with lecturers and support staff, you can take an interactive tour of our campus and see first-hand why WIT is home to over 2,000 first year students each year.

What is the difference between a virtual open day and a traditional on campus open day?

WIT's virtual open days are focused around discipline areas. Each day lecturers and support staff from our five academic schools (business, engineering, health sciences, humanities, and science and computing) will be online to answer your questions and help you choose the college courses that's right for you. What's really interesting is you can join the conversation and see the questions other prospective students have. The trick is to get involved and converse with the online experts.

Who can I expect to talk to?

A big part of each virtual open day is the chance to talk with lecturers who deliver our undergraduate programmes and the support staff from right across the institute. Online each day you can chat with staff from our admissions, schools liaison, outreach, fees and grants, accommodation and student life and learning departments. WIT's virtual open days are a great way to talk to the right people that sometimes you might miss at a busy on campus open day.

How will I know what the campus looks like?

Prospective students can take an interactive virtual campus tours. Choose to take a tour of our main Cork Road campus or the WIT Arena. Explore our fantastic facilities and student friendly campus. See what our classrooms and lecture halls look like and imagine the seat you could be sitting in soon.

Where can I find more information about WIT's Virtual Open Days?

For more information visit www.wit.ie/open.
